How to Legally Transfer Data Cross Border from China

Knowing how to transfer data outside of China legally is an important issue for multinational companies and Chinese companies with overseas business. On 1 September 2022, the Chinese government implemented newly promulgated rules controlling the transfer of data abroad, marking a new step in Chinese campaign to tighten oversight over the digital space.

China's Cybersecurity Law ("CSL"), Personal Information Protection Law ("PIPL") and Data Security Law ("DSL") set a series of rules and requirements for the cross-border transfer of data, especially Personal Information located in China. These rules and requirements have strong impacts on the business activities of companies operating in or investing in China. Data processors subject to the Chinese data protection laws will consider three mechanisms in planning for their data cross-border transfer: the security assessment, the China Standard Contractual Clauses, and the security certification.

During the webinar, our speakers, Allen Chen, Forensic Partner from Mazars in China, and Star Chen, our Forensic Director from Mazars in Hong Kong, will help you understand the pain-points companies experienced with obtaining Chinese government approval and implementing the Chinese SCCs for outbound data transfer and provide practical suggestions.

Our seminar will focus on the following key points:

- What types of companies in China are CSL, PIPL, and DSL suitable for?
- Rules and precautions to be observed by Chinese companies in transmitting data outside China (Certified Organisation, Data Protection Impact Assessment, Standard Contract Registration)
- Other incoming Actions (Draft for comments: Compliance Audit on Personal Information Protection)
- How will the current cross-border data flow impacted?
- Practical tips for companies going through the complex process, including the different ways companies can approach the process, potential changes in companies' daily operations, etc...
