Speakers:

Jason White, Partner, Sovereign Wealth

Stephanie Chan, Tax Director, Sovereign Tax Advisers

Snap Election and UK Non-Domicile Changes: What's going to happen?

In the recent UK Spring Budget, the UK Government announced a reform of the tax regime for non-UK domiciled individuals, which may have a far-reaching impact on these individuals. These reforms are also likely to benefit long term non-resident British expatriates.

While the upcoming election casts a shadow on precisely how this will roll out, the opposition has signalled that they will also look at this area and, despite not being able to tell the future, it's clear - change is coming.

Join our experts as we explore the implications of the proposed changes and the potential timing of these, the transitional arrangements, and practical steps you can take to prepare for these potential changes. We'll also cover the expected impacts this will have on expatriates who currently retain their UK domicile.

About the speakers

Jason has been working in the wealth management sector since 2005, where he helps individuals build goal-based financial plans designed to help achieve those goals. He advises clients on strategies for wealth creation, preservation and succession within the wider context of long-term financial advice.

Stephanie provides tailored and expert advice that ensures British expatriates abroad can maximise their financial well-being while meeting their UK tax obligations. She also provides a number of services, such as tax returns, Inheritance Tax planning, repatriation advice and Capital Gains Tax optimisation.
